About Canam Immigration's RCIC Referral Program

Over the last few years, the Canadian government has imposed unprecedented restrictions on immigration streams that once formed the backbone of many RCIC practices. Business programs have been reduced or eliminated, processing times have become unpredictable, rules change overnight, and the ability to forecast the future for clients has become nearly impossible. As a result, countless RCIC firms—large and small—are entering a period of instability, unsure how to secure sustainable revenue or provide clients with stable, predictable pathways.

This is where CanAm Immigration and New York Immigration Law Group, operating since 1994, can become a strategic lifeline and a powerful extension of your firm's future. We support clients at every stage of their immigration journey: From choosing the best immigration pathway to providing landing services in Florida.

For over 30 years, our team has specialised exclusively in U.S. business immigration, securing more than 27,000 U.S. business immigration visas, guiding over 7,000 companies, and building a 12-division one-stop-shop ecosystem that supports investors, professionals, and expanding businesses from A to Z.

Unlike the volatility of current Canadian policies, U.S. business immigration remains stable, consistent, and fully operational. These categories are based on long-standing bilateral treaties and federal statutes, not quota-dependent pilot programs. Their criteria are clear. Their pathways are proven. Their approval logic is business-driven, not politically driven. Your clients—entrepreneurs, investors, executives, skilled professionals—are already asking:

- "What are my options if Canada closes the doors?"
- "How can I protect my family's future?"
- "Is there a way to expand into the United States?"

Through this partnership, you can finally answer YES. Earn a commission on every referral that becomes a paying Canam client. With uncapped commission, support your business with a second stream of revenue in these uncertain times. Refer to Inducement: Section 13 (1) and (2) for CICC compliance regarding referral fees.

Mission and Vision

The CanAm referral program offers you a Plan B in these uncertain times.

Mission

At CanAm Immigration and the New York Immigration Law Group, our mission is to empower professionals, advisors, and licensed consultants with a reliable, ethical, and fully supported pathway to U.S. business immigration solutions.

Since 1994, our team has specialised in protecting families, guiding investors, and supporting companies as they establish operations in the United States. For over 30 years, CanAm Immigration has stood by one simple, guiding principle: Families First. Immigration is not just about visas, paperwork, or policies — it's about people uprooting their lives in search of something better. It's about starting fresh in a new country, building a future, and doing it together.

Through our Referral Partner Program, we extend this mission to RCICs who want to offer their clients secure, proven options during a time when Canadian immigration policies are shifting and unpredictable.

Vision

Our vision is to be the most trusted and ethical cross-border immigration and business expansion network in North America, providing RCICs with long-term stability, new opportunities, and a powerful extension to their practice. As Canadian programs continue to evolve, our vision is to provide RCICs with a safe, compliant, and proven way to support clients seeking opportunities beyond Canada.

Our long-term vision includes:

A National RCIC Network: The leading cross-border referral ecosystem in Canada.
Clear, Ethical Pathways: U.S. immigration delivered only by licensed U.S. attorneys.
Investor Protection Standards: Including the CanAm Seal of Approval for vetted business opportunities.
A New Way to Access the American Dream: Structured, transparent, and supported by a full U.S. operational platform.

Frequently Asked Questions

Ethics.

Does working with Canam Immigration and New York Immigration Law Group violate RCIC Ethical Standards?

In today's rapidly evolving Canadian immigration environment, RCICs face an unprecedented challenge: shrinking federal programs, unpredictable changes, and limited business pathways for their clients. Many RCICs are seeking new, ethical, and compliant ways to serve their global client base while maintaining the highest standards of the College of Immigration and Citizenship Consultants (CICC). Naturally, some ask:

"If I partner with CanAm Immigration and New York Immigration Law Group for U.S. business immigration, does this violate my code of ethics?"

The answer is simple, clear, and fully compliant:

Absolutely not.

Working with CanAm and New York Immigration Law Group is fully aligned with the professional and ethical obligations of RCICs—because you are not practising U.S. immigration law, nor are you providing U.S. immigration advice. You are collaborating with a licensed, experienced, cross-border legal team that has been practising U.S. business immigration since 1994.

Frequently Asked Questions

CICC compliancy.

RCICs Are Not Authorised to Practice U.S. Immigration Law—We Are.

The CICC code of ethics is very clear: RCICs may only practice Canadian immigration law unless they are formally licensed elsewhere. When you work with CanAm and New York Immigration Law Group, you remain fully compliant because:

- We handle all U.S. immigration filings.
- We provide all U.S. immigration advice.
- We represent the client directly with U.S. immigration authorities.

You are not providing U.S. immigration services. You are not completing U.S. legal documents. You are not communicating with USCIS, U.S. Consulates and Embassies, or legal systems. Our licensed American legal team does all U.S. immigration representation. You remain compliant. We remain accountable for U.S. immigration.

You Do Not Violate Territorial Practice Restrictions.

RCICs must practice only within their legal authority—Canadian immigration. Our structure ensures:

- You remain within Canadian jurisdiction.
- You do not provide U.S. legal opinions.
- You do not cross-regulated boundaries.
- You do not engage in unlicensed practice.

You simply refer, collaborate, and support your client as their trusted advisor—just as RCICs do when referring clients to lawyers for Canadian tax matters, family law, or criminal inadmissibility. This model is fully allowed under CICC guidelines.

Frequently Asked Questions

Responsibility to clients.

How does participating in the CanAm Referral Program affect my clients?

Canadian immigration and U.S. immigration often intersect. Clients need both sides. In our model:

You remain the client's primary Canadian advisor. You continue managing:

- Express Entry.
- Provincial programs.
- Work permits.
- Family sponsorship.
- Canadian citizenship.
- Inadmissibility issues.

We manage the U.S. side. We handle:

- U.S investor visas.
- Business executive transfers to U.S. offices.
- U.S. extraordinary talent visa applications.
- Corporate setup, compliance, and U.S. business operations

This structure protects the client and ensures full compliance on both sides of the border. Ethical practice includes acting in the client's best interests. When Canadian programs become restricted, RCICs must offer alternatives. That is where we step in and offer U.S. business immigration options. By collaborating with us, you expand your client's possibilities without stepping outside your regulated role. You maximise client wellbeing, which is the highest standard of ethical practice.

Frequently Asked Questions

Transparency.

Transparency and informed consent are built into our model. To remain compliant, RCIC members must be transparent with their clients about their role in the CanAm Referral Program. RCICs must disclose:

- The role of each party.
- The services provided.
- The scope of representation.
- The legal responsibilities of each team.

Our partnership model is designed for clarity:

- You disclose that licensed U.S. counsel will handle U.S. immigration through Canam Immigration and the New York Immigration Law Group.
- Clients sign authorisations acknowledging representation.
- You remain their Canadian advisor.
- We become their U.S. business immigration legal representatives.

Everything is documented, transparent, and compliant.

Conclusion

This Partnership Strengthens Your Ethics: It Does Not Violate Them

Working with CanAm Immigration and the New York Immigration Law Group ensures:

- Full compliance with CICC regulations.
- Zero unlicensed practice of U.S. immigration.
- Full transparency and client protection.
- Alignment with ethical and professional standards.

You maintain your integrity. We handle the U.S. legal side. Your clients receive a complete cross-border solution which is always ethical and compliant.
